CarInsurance.com's rate analysis finds that Island, Erie, Mapfre, USAA, Nationwide and State Farm are among those with the cheapest car insurance for teens among carriers surveyed.

The average rates for teenagers on their own policies range from $7,625 per year for full coverage for a 16-year-old to $4,132 a year for a full-coverage policy for a 19-year-old. However, drivers can save money by adding a teen to a parent's policy rather than the teen purchasing one on their own. Furthermore, car insurance is cheaper for female teens than for male teens to the tune of hundreds of dollars per year.

"Car insurance for teens is pricey, but teens can save money on car insurance by shopping around, earning discounts for good grades and living away from home and driving a vehicle that's rated highly for safety by auto insurance carriers," says Laura Longero, executive editor for CarInsurance.com.

Longero is available to discuss the ins and outs of car insurance for teens, and other ways to save on auto insurance.
