“Slow down when there’s winter weather and increase your following distance,” says Laura Longero, executive editor for CarInsurance.com. “Drivers should ask themselves whether they really need to make that trip; if the weather is too risky to drive, stay home. No matter what, avoid following navigation that leads off main highways onto dirt roads in rural areas when unfamiliar with the terrain during the winter months as it’s easy to become stranded. This is especially important during snowstorms.”

Other tips for drivers:

- Stock an emergency kit in the vehicle
- Carry tire chains and sand for wheel traction
- Make sure cars are tuned up and check lights and windshield wipers
- Check tires to ensure they still have a tread of 2/32 of an inch or more
- Give snowplows plenty of room

Longero is available to discuss winter weather driving.
